Happy Thanksgiving...

...remember the people who help so many at this time

Warming hands

Visit Madison Inc. is establishing a "Mittens & Marshmallows" drive to collect gloves and mittens to be given away free to children over the two-day Wonderland in the Park holiday event at Bicentennial Park Friday, Dec. 13 and Saturday, Dec. 14. The plan is to place a donation collection box where local residents can drop off new mittens and gloves to be passed out to children at Wonderland. Any surplus mittens and gloves will be donated to the Salvation Army for its use. Details will be announced soon on the location and date when the collection box will be in place.

Don't forget state hospital

As Christmas approaches, the staff at Madison State Hospital is asking the community to remember the patients at the hospital in holiday plans. Madison State Hospital provides a number of greatly needed services to adults struggling with the most severe of mental health challenges in this community and across Indiana. Its work has a powerful impact on the people it works with directly and on the larger community as a whole. If you would like to make a donation, write your check or money order to: MSH Patient Christmas Fund, 711 Green Road, Madison 47250. Your gift will be placed in the Patient Christmas Recreation Fund to benefit all patients there at Christmas.

Shopping with police, firefighters

Jefferson County firefighters and law enforcement agencies are taking applications for their annual shopping trip with area families and children.

The Christmas with a Cop and Shop with a Firefighter programs make the applications available in November.

The deadline for families to return applications this year is Dec. 6.

The annual shopping trips focus on making sure children in need receive necessary clothing items — and more if there is money to spare.

The law enforcement officers — Jefferson County Sheriff's Department, Madison Police and Hanover Police — are sponsored by the Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 28 in Madison and partner with the Veterans of the Foreign Wars Post 1969 to raise money through a Poker Run in September. Donations are taken year-round at all of the law enforcement offices for the Christmas with a Cop program. Applications also are available at the law enforcement offices.

Shop with a Firefighter applications are available at Madison Consolidated, Prince of Peace and Southwestern schools; area fire stations; the County Commissioners' office; the county libraries; German American, Farmers and First Financial banks; QOHVAC; OVO Head Start; Boys and Girls Club and Girls Inc. Anyone wishing to donate to Shop with a Firefighter should call the City of Madison Fire Department at 812-265-8350.

LET THE 'RINGING' BEGIN

Friday is first day of annual "bellringer" holiday campaign

The Salvation Army's familiar Red Kettles will be popping up at local businesses and around Jefferson County beginning Nov. 29 and will be there through Christmas Eve.

"It's the holiday season and there are many in our community who are in need this year," said Lt. Justin Hartley. "Our goal for the kettle campaign will be $120,000."

Funds raised through the Red Kettle Christmas campaign help support programs and services in Jefferson County throughout the year and account for a third of The Salvation Army's annual budget. Families in need can receive food and toys during the holiday season. A daily feeding program serves breakfast and lunch Monday through Friday, and serves more than 40,000 meals each year.

"A free dental clinic at The Salvation Army has provided more than a million dollars' worth of dental care in the 10-plus years it has been in existence," Hartley said. "We also provide community service programs such as music, dance and character-building programs, summer camp opportunities, Pathway of Hope, Vacation Bible School and Emergency Disaster Services," he said.

Groups or individuals interested in participating in Salvation Army bell-ringing should go to www.registertoring.com to sign up. For more information, contact Hartley at The Salvation Army, 812-265-2157.

The Salvation Army is making it easier for donors to give back during the Christmas season by making a gift with Apple Pay or Google Pay at the iconic Red Kettles. Smart chips and QR codes will be placed on Red Kettle signs across Jefferson County, allowing shoppers to simply "bump" or scan their phones to make a digital donation. Shoppers will be directed to a custom donation page that accepts Apple or Google payment options. The funds will then be distributed to local Salvation Army units based on the donor's billing ZIP code, and an email receipt will be sent directly to their phone.

ISP focusing on accident reduction over Thanksgiving

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana State Police are reminding motorists of the importance of driving responsibly during the Thanksgiving holiday period, which officially starts tomorrow and is one of the busiest travel periods of the year. Troopers will be participating in Operation Combined Accident Reduction Effort, which is a federally funded project and will allow additional troopers to patrol area highways through Sunday. Troopers will be aggressively watching for moving violations, dangerous and impaired drivers, and drivers and passengers not buckling up. Last year during the Thanksgiving holiday, 12 fatal crashes occurred on Indiana roadways. The Indiana State Police encourages everyone to help reduce crashes, injuries, and fatalities over this holiday period by driving responsiblyand making sure drivers are well-rested, especially if traveling a long distance. They remind drivers to avoid driving distracted, don't use a cellphone while driving, avoid "hanging out" in the left lane on multilane highways, follow other motorists at a safe distance, obey all speed limits, use turn signals, ensure everyone is buckled up and don't drink and drive.

Legislation to honor Ernie Pyle introduced

DANA — U.S. Senators Todd Young and Mike Braun have introduced legislation to rename the post office in Dana, after Ernest 'Ernie' T. Pyle, the celebrated war correspondent and Hoosier journalist who was born near Dana. On April 18, 1945, Pyle was reporting on the U.S. Army's 305th Infantry Regiment when he was killed. "Naming the Dana post office after Ernie Pyle is one way to honor the important contributions of this celebrated war correspondent who made a lasting impact on American journalism," said Young. "I'm proud to join with my Indiana colleagues to pay tribute to this Hoosier hero." Braun said, "Ernie Pyle is an American hero who gave his life in World War II and it's only fitting to name the post office in Dana, Indiana after him." After studying journalism at Indiana University, Ernie Pyle served as a beloved correspondent in Indiana and later overseas during World War II. Beginning his career at La Porte's The Daily Herald. He went on to receive the Pulitzer Prize for his distinguished reporting of WWII in 1944.

100 tons of poultry donated to needy

INDIANAPOLIS — Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch accepted more than 100 tons — or 200,000 pounds — of poultry products to benefit families in need on behalf of the state as part of the 72nd annual poultry donation. Crouch, the Indiana State Poultry Association (ISPA), the Indiana State Department of Agriculture and Gleaners Food Bank of Indiana came together to provide poultry products ahead of the holiday season. "It is an honor to recognize our Hoosier poultry farmers with this tradition, which goes back 72 years," said Crouch. "The products donated, not only today, but throughout the year, will go a long way in ensuring our Hoosiers in need have fresh and nutritious food to consume." According to the USDA National Agriculture Statistics Service, Indiana ranks No. 1 in duck production, No. 2 in chicken and egg production and No. 4 in turkey production nationwide. The poultry industry is a substantial economic driver for the state and contributes more than $12 billion in total economic activity. Additionally, this sector employs more than 12,000.

Longtime Rep. Burton retiring from legislature

INDIANAPOLIS — The brother of former U.S. Rep. Dan Burton is planning to retire after 32 years in the Indiana Legislature. Republican state Rep. Woody Burton of Whiteland said he won't seek re-election next year but will complete his term with the 2020 legislative session. Burton was first elected in 1988 and represents a heavily Republican district that includes the southern Indianapolis suburbs of Greenwood and Whiteland in Johnson County. He's credited with leading legislation allowing drivers to acquire the "In God We Trust" auto license plate at no extra cost and establishing bullying prevention programs in schools. His older brother, Dan Burton, served in Congress from a central Indiana district for 30 years before retiring in 2012.

SCOTTSBORO, Ala. — Authorities in Alabama say a Purdue University student died in a 200-foot fall while rappelling in a cave. News outlets report 21-year-old Trever Col died Saturday after his equipment failed in Valhalla Cave Preserve in northern Alabama. The cave is known for its 227-foot pitch and its mile-long walkway at the bottom. Jackson County Sheriff Chuck Phillips says Col was one of five Purdue students exploring the cave. All were experienced hikers with cavern access permits. Phillips says Col's rigging had come loose due to a knot in the rope and Col fell while trying to fix it. Purdue officials say Col was a senior from Austin, Texas, who was studying mechanical engineering. Phillips says Col is the third person to die in the cave this year.

Wet spring, dry summer hurt Christmas tree crop

SHEPHERDSVILLE — A soggy spring followed by a summer drought has hurt the Christmas tree crop on at least one Kentucky farm. Elizabeth Werkmeister Shafer said she lost half of the 600 trees she planted this year at her Werkmeister Christmas Tree Farm in Bullitt County. After an unusually wet spring, Louisville saw record-low rain in September. All 120 Kentucky counties issued drought declarations. A majority declared a level two drought, signaling a severe impact on crops. Tim O'Connor is executive director for the National Christmas Tree Association. He said he has not heard of serious drought-related losses this year, but droughts can have a major impact on new seedlings. Regardless, Werkmeister Shafer plans to keep at it, saying she won't give up on the family farm that easily.

Free cedar Christmas trees offered by park

GOLDEN POND — Land Between the Lakes National Recreation Area in Kentucky and Tennessee is offering free cedar Christmas tree permits starting this week. The permits are available online Friday through Christmas Eve. Permits, maps and guidelines are available online. The permits are also available in person at the park's Administrative Office Monday through Friday during the same period. Permits allow the holder to cut one cedar tree in specific areas of the park. Rules and regulations are available on the reservations page. The park says no matter where you get your tree, be sure it's fresh and isn't dry because it could catch fire.

Mammoth Cave to host 40th holiday cave sing

MAMMOTH CAVE — Mammoth Cave National Park will kick off the holiday season with its 40th Annual Cave Sing Sunday. Park spokeswoman Molly Schroer said the planned sing gives the park a chance to do something different than the normal cave tour. The echoing acoustics of the limestone halls provide create a great space for belting out holiday tunes. The program begins with a piano concert in the Lodge at Mammoth Cave. They visitors will enter the cave itself to hear the Mammoth Cave chapter of the Caveman Chorus perform a cappella Christmas tunes.

Kenlake State Park getting upgrades

AURORA — Kenlake State Resort Park is getting about $560,000 in improvements under a state initiative to upgrade Kentucky's parks. The funding will include a new roof for the lodge at the park. It's part of the state's "Restoring the Finest" initiative. Kenlake State Resort Park will have received about $1.2 million in improvements since 2016. The park is on the shores of Kentucky Lake in Marshall County in western Kentucky. Tourism, Arts and Heritage Secretary Don Parkinson said the improvements keep the parks safe and attractive to guests. Lawmakers approved a $50 million bond issue for the "Restoring the Finest" campaign in state parks during the 2019 General Assembly.

LOUISVILLE — Kentucky Gov. Matt Bevin has pardoned a man serving life in prison for sexually abusing his 6-year-old stepdaughter. Bevin issued the pardon Friday, saying that Paul Donel Hurt was wrongly convicted of first-degree sexual abuse and sodomy in Louisville in 2001. Hurt's accuser recanted her testimony at a hearing in 2015, but the conviction stood. Hurt was released from the Kentucky State Reformatory on Friday.

Southwestern Moose to host Red Cross drives

Southwestern High School and Madison's Moose Lodge will both host Red Cross blood drives in December as part of 10 upcoming donation opportunities through Dec. 12 in Southern Indiana.

The American Red Cross urges eligible donors to be the lifeline for patients in need this holiday season by making an appointment to give blood or platelets. While helping to save lives is likely motivation enough, those who donate through Dec. 18 will also receive a $5 Amazon.com Gift Card via email, courtesy of Suburban Propane.

Additionally, those who give blood through Nov. 30 will receive an exclusive long-sleeved T-shirt, while supplies last.

The Madison Moose Lodge No. 765, 1340 Michigan Road, will host a blood donor drive from noon to 5 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 5 and Southwestern High School, 167 South Main Cross, Hanover, will host from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 10, at the Laura Cash Boldery Activities Center.

As schedules grow busy with holiday parties, shopping and fun with friends and family, many blood and platelet donors delay giving. Unfortunately, that may lead to delays in treatments for patients who rely on blood. Right now, there is a critical need for type O blood donors.

Donating blood is quick and easy and finding a location to donate is also convenient. Donors can search for locations by ZIP code as well as make an appointment to donate using the Red Cross Blood Donor App, by going online at RedCrossBlood.org or by calling 1-800-RED CROSS.

The entire donation process takes about an hour, but donors can save about 15 minutes by completing RapidPass® — a pre-donation reading and completion of health history questions — prior to arriving for their appointment.

Those who donate get important health information including a mini-health screening to help determine eligibility that includes blood pressure, pulse and hemoglobin readings. First-time donors will also find out their blood type soon after donating.

The Red Cross blood drive will also visit Corydon, Lanesville and both Seymour and North Vernon twice prior to Dec. 12.

For more information about the drive at Southwestern, call Stephanie Nussbaum at 812-866-1108 or Mickey Waller at 812-866-1199 to schedule a donation time.

Officials: Vaping a frequent problem in Brown Co. schools

By SUZANNAH COUCH
Brown County Democrat

As soon as Cooper Olmsted woke up, he knew something was wrong.

For a couple of months, Olmsted, 18, had had a cough that wouldn't go away, even with over-the-counter cough medicine or cough drops. It would get better, but the cough would linger.

There were times the senior had to run out of class at Brown County High School because he was coughing so hard he could not catch his breath.

"You hear there's this going around and that going around, so you totally put it off to a bug going around. Then, the cough turns into a cough that you've never heard before," said his mother, Melissa.

At night, the coughs were worse. He would wake everyone up.

Finally, Cooper realized that he was truly sick and he was scared.

Just before fall break, Cooper and his mom went to see nurse practitioner Cindy Colglazier.

"He was able to be honest with her. She made him feel comfortable and not guilty. Yes, the chest x-ray showed bronchitis, but that was not the underlying problem. It's obvious it was much more serious than that," Melissa said.

Cooper had been vaping tobacco for the past couple years. Vaping had made its way into the high school his freshman year, he said.

"I asked what it was, and then I hit it. I kept on finding people that had them and kept hitting one. Then I got my own. I went on from there."

Older students would buy vape cartridges and cigarettes for Cooper when he was underage.

"It was better than smoking a cigarette. It's what the packages said and what everyone else was saying," he said.

Because vapes — also known as e-cigarettes — are marketed as a way to quit smoking cigarettes, Cooper said he felt safe using one.

He also had been smoking cigarettes since he was 16, something Melissa tried to get him to quit.

"You take it from him. You go through their car. You go through their room. But then he just gets more. I've tried to explain to Cooper, your health is your wealth. You have nothing without your health," Melissa said.

Now, Cooper is smoke-free. However, he has lung damage that will require him to see a pulmonologist. He hasn't seen that specialist yet, so the extent of the damage is not known.

This month, Cooper was on his second round of antibiotics. He has to use inhalers and do breathing treatments three times a week for two weeks. "The antibiotics really don't do anything for the vaping (damage), just the bronchitis," Melissa said.

"When I start reading this stuff and seeing it on the news that kids are dying, I'm like, 'Cooper, is this really happening? Is this what's going on?' … You're seeing this on TV, kids are dying and you're like, 'That's what's going on with my boy. I can't believe he's this sick.'"

Melissa is proud of her son for stepping up and making a change in his life.

"After seeing Cindy again, he was like, 'Mom, I wish I would have listened to you sooner.' That means everything. You don't want to say, 'I told you so,' but dang it, I just hate him having to learn the hard way," she said.

Cooper is using his health scare to let his classmates know that vaping is dangerous.

"I saw a freshman in the bathroom today hit a vape…. I said, 'You're dumb. You see me over here coughing a lung up and you're just over here thinking it's cool to do it? You don't smoke cigarettes. You're not even old enough. What's the point?'" Cooper said.

Cooper was approached by health and physical education teacher Julie Owens to talk with her classes about his experience.

"In your mind, you think it's a good thing keeping you from smoking cigarettes, but all it is is another thing that's going to get you sick. It's almost worse than cigarettes, I'd say," Cooper said.

"Taking a deep breath of fresh air, I could almost puke. It's rough. I'm still coughing, but I feel better."

He wants kids to know vaping doesn't make them cool. "That's what mostly all of the kids think: 'This kid has a vape. Oh, if I get one, I'll be in their friend group,'" he said.

"I've told kids, like, 'Dude, you're dumb.'"

'Not getting better'

In a recent government survey, 1 in 4 high school students reported using e-cigarettes in October, according to the Associated Press.

President Donald Trump's administration is working to raise the age to purchase electronic cigarettes from 18 to 21 to help combat youth vaping. The minimum age is currently 18 under federal law. Raising the age would require congressional action, according to the AP.

At Brown County High School, students have been caught using and charging their vapes in class. Since the vapes give off a vapor, it is not detectable by smoke detectors in the restrooms and locker rooms.

"I don't even know where to begin with what to do, because we're going after it. We're trying, but it's hard," Principal Matt Stark said.

A vapor detector could cost as much as $1,000, and the high school would need at least six of them, Stark said.

"This has exploded," he said.

"Last year was bad and this year is worse. It's not getting better."

Vaping is the No. 1 infraction at the high school.

One big problem with vapes is that they are not easily noticeable, Stark said.

"Now, they look like a flash drive. Then the one I saw yesterday was one that looks like a pencil," he said.

"If someone has something in their mouth, you can generally see it, because there's a bulge in their lip or whatever. If someone is smoking a cigarette, it has a distinct odor and you're going to see smoke. The vapes, there are all kinds of things on the internet on how to hide vaping," he said.

Students have primarily been caught vaping in the locker rooms and bathrooms. They have also been caught vaping on field trips and on the bus — basically anywhere without supervision, Stark said.

Electronic cigarettes are treated like tobacco possession at the high school. Students are ticketed for tobacco possession on school grounds for their first offense and are required to attend a tobacco cessation class. On the second and third offenses, students receive police tickets along with out-of-school suspension.

A ticket is $158. The prosecutor's office offers a deferral program for first-time offenders. Students are required to show up for a court hearing with a guardian to get enrolled in deferral. They are then required to complete 12 hours of community service with a nonprofit organization within 45 days and must stay ticket-free for six months.

If a student receives another ticket while on the program, then they will be required to pay the previous and new tickets and are kicked out of the program, said Mandy Parman with the prosecutor's office.

"It's a fad. They police it pretty hard, the school does. If I spot it, I take them to task on it. I'll write them a ticket. Then they deal with Stark and (Assistant Principal Chuck) Hutchins," he said.

"For me, I don't lecture them on it. They got that lecture from the school. … I try to treat them like young adults, even at the junior high school level. There's no sense in doing anything other than being polite and treat them like their parent."

"It's not hitting poverty kids more. It's not hitting kids who are struggling academically more. It's across everybody — honor kids, everybody," Stark said.

Brown County Schools are smoke-free campuses, meaning not even teachers can possess tobacco there.

Stark believes that vape flavors play a role in students picking up the habit.

"It's not cigarettes. It's not the nastiness of cigarettes. It's the different flavors," he said.

"… 'It's just vaping.' I've heard that. 'Why are you guys so mean? It's just vaping.' It's like, really?" Stark said.

No boundaries

Students at Brown County Junior High and intermediate schools — whose ages range from 10 to 15 — are not immune to this trend.

"In the last couple of years is when it seems to have become a really huge problem," said Brian Garman, the junior high principal.

"First, we didn't know what they were. I had never seen one. I remember the first time we saw one we were like, 'What is this?'" Garman said.

"Then, they got really pretty rampant last year. This year (when) we started off the year it was pretty bad."

But lately, vaping has not been as big of an issue at the junior high. Garman credits the decline to recent news coverage of topics like vape-associated deaths, the Trump administration working to ban flavored vapes, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention issuing a warning about the use of e-cigarettes.

Administrators at the junior high and intermediate schools are made aware of students vaping on the bus or in class when other students report it.

"If you're working on a project or something, you're sort of in the back corner, you can do it pretty quick. It's just a cloud of vapor and it goes away pretty quick. There's a smell, but it's not unlike someone's cologne, maybe, or perfume. It would be pretty easy to miss if you didn't know what you were looking for," Garman said.

"It seemed to know no boundaries. It was really being experimented by a lot of students across all kind of groups."

Students are now being educated on the dangers of vaping in their health classes and through social-emotional learning curricula Second Step at the junior high.

When junior high students are caught the first time with a vape, they take a tobacco cessation class and serve an in-school suspension. The second time a student is caught could mean an out-of-school suspension, but it's rare a junior high student is caught a second time, Garman said.

Parents are supportive of punishment at school, he said. "They are always like, 'Oh my gosh, I don't want them doing that,'" Garman said.

The junior high rarely deals with students possessing cigarettes or chewing tobacco now, Garman said.

Typically, students are caught possessing a vape and not actually using it in school. Officials will watch security footage from bus rides and will catch students vaping that way, too.

Brown County Schools Nurse Holly Gordon is working on a presentation for intermediate school students on the dangers of vaping. She also runs the cessation classes for the junior high and high school, which are three-hour classes students must take and pass a test over with at least an 80-percent score.

"They don't realize that vaping is something serious. It's like, 'Well, it's not like a cigarette.' Well, no, it really kind of is,'" said intermediate school Principal Trent Austin.

Last year, four vapes were confiscated at the intermediate school, and so far none this year. Austin does not think of vaping as being an "epidemic" in his school.

"I wouldn't call it a huge issue; however, I would say any vapes in the hands of fifth- and sixth-graders is an issue," Austin said.

Austin said vapes are usually confiscated from sixth-graders and are primarily found after they use them on the school bus. "They want to show it off on the bus. They will show their buddies. As soon as they come to school, a student will come to me and report, 'Hey, there was a vape on the bus.' I'll do a search," Austin said.

He said students usually take a vape from their parents or older siblings without them knowing. Some older siblings may even buy the vapes for them.

The most important part of addressing vaping is making sure parents are aware their student had a vape and where they got it. Austin said the punishment for intermediate school students can range depending on the situation from detention to in-school suspension.

"When you bring in a vape to school and you're trying to make a transaction, in that case right there that warrants to me an out-of-school suspension. Otherwise, we try to take care of most of the problems in house," Austin said.

"That's not a common problem (making transactions), but it's an example of a few issues we've seen."

Austin said vaping is not something he expected to deal with as the intermediate school principal. "At the same time, I know that some of our kids don't always have the best role models, and that has an impact on their ability to make the right decision," he said.

"What we see a lot of times is when the kids bring them in, it's not like they're trying to hide them for their own personal use. They want to show them off and say, 'Hey, look what I have.'"

But it's also important to keep the numbers in perspective, he added.

"We had 260 kids here last year and four incidents. We have a bunch of kids making the right decisions."

Vaping young

"It's terrifying," Gordon said about students vaping in schools.

"There's not a ton of research out, since vaping is such a new phenomenon. There's beginning to be some, but we have no long-term studies on it because it's so new, whereas tobacco, we know exactly what's going to happen to your lungs if you smoke for X-amount of years. We don't know that with vaping, so it's potentially super scary."

Gordon has been the corporation nurse since the 2017-2018 school year. That year, she had eight high school students enrolled in her tobacco cessation course. For the 2018-2019 school year, that number jumped to 21.

So far this year, 18 high school students have been enrolled in the course.

"Kids, a lot of them, are not seeing effects right away, so they're not thinking long term, 'This could potentially be really damaging for me,'" Gordon said.

"There's no classic, 'Oh, that kid's a vaper.' If you're young, you're probably most likely vaping."

Gordon said school officials want to help kids quit vaping if they wish to do so. "I feel like it kind of let kids know that it's OK to admit that you are vaping, and there are resources here to help you quit when you're ready to quit," she said.

Parents be aware

Being able to tell if your child is vaping may be difficult because it is easy to hide and doesn't have an odor like cigarette smoke.

Gordon advises parents to look for changes in their child's behavior. "Are they being more secretive?" she said.

"Just be aware. Know your child well enough to know what's going on. Just be aware of any changes in their behavior or activity, like hanging out with new people, or they are less interested in things?"

Gordon said if your child seems more irritable than usual, that could also be a sign of nicotine addiction from vaping.

She said students don't realize they are going to get addicted to nicotine by vaping.

"They are told from marketing, from these e-cigarette companies, that it's safer than smoking cigarettes. In a way, that may be true, but that doesn't mean it's safe. They see safer and they think, 'Oh, this is safe for me to do,'" she said.

Most students end up quitting vaping after they get in trouble at school, cannot participate in after-school activities and their parents find out, Gordon said.

Students also can persuade their peers to quit. Gordon knew one student who wouldn't date a boy after finding out he vaped. "I feel like there's peer pressure on one side of it to start vaping, but then on the other end, there's a strong, 'I don't want to be a part of that either.' I think that can motivate some kids to quit, too," she said.

Overall, the danger of students vaping at a young age is that their brains are not fully developed until they are 25 years old. "They're more likely to become addicted to things than an adult would because they are not fully developed," Gordon said. "… It could have lifetime effects on them and they are just not realizing it yet. … That's the scary part."

COURIER STAFF REPORT

Police in Carrollton responded to a report of a traffic accident in the 400 block of Hawkins Street Friday where they found a Henry County man dead. Johnny F. Mahuron Jr., 68, of Port Royal, Kentucky, apparently died from a medical emergency before striking a parked vehicle, according to an investigation by the Carrollton Police Department and Carroll County Coroner's Office.

The crash occurred at about 3:40 p.m. Friday as Mahuron was driving west on Hawkins Street and struck a parked vehicle before his vehicle came to a final rest against an apartment building on Hawkins Street.

Carrollton Police Officer James Dews investigated the incident and was assisted by Officer Nick Abbott. The Carroll County Sheriff's Department, Carroll County EMS, and the Carrollton Fire Department also assisted at the scene.

COURIER STAFF REPORT

Competition from other drug dealers bringing you down? The Jennings County Sheriff's Office will sniff them out for you, in exchange for their name and information.

That's the deal the sheriff's office advertised on its Facebook page Thursday, attaching a picture of a tip form promising to "take away your financial worries."

"Are you not making the profits you once did? We are here to help eliminate the competition!" the form read. "HOW? By filling out the easy to complete form below!"

While tongue-in-cheek in their approach, drugs are no laughing matter for officers in Jennings County, especially on days like Nov. 19, when they seized 14.5 grams of suspected fentanyl and seven grams of methamphetamine, plus marijuana and paraphernalia.

The sheriff's office noted the amount was large enough to cause the overdose of 5,000 to 6,000 people — close to the population of North Vernon. From Jan. 1 to Nov. 21, the county coroner has responded to 69 death scenes, 19 of which have been drug-related, the same Facebook post read.

"We're attacking it as hard as we can," Jennings County Sheriff Kenny Freeman said. "And I do find these forms helpful."

The investigation leading to the bust started when the sheriff's office received word of a Shey M. Richardson, 27, of North Vernon distributing narcotics in the community. The Jennings County Sheriff's Office Narcotics team obtained a search warrant for 303 Laurel St., North Vernon, and executed it with members of the Jennings County Sheriff's Office Special Response Team around 10:50 p.m. Tuesday.

In addition to the drugs, officers also found and arrested Richardson and Dillon W. Steinert, 24, of Butlerville. Steinert was wanted on four active arrest warrants — three in Jennings County and one in Jackson County — and taken to Jennings County Jail.

Richardson is also being held at Jennings County Jail on a $20,055 cash bond on the counts of dealing a narcotic drug, Level 2; possession of meth over five grams, Level 5; possession of a syringe, Level 6; maintaining a common nuisance, Level 6; possession of paraphernalia, Class A misdemeanor and obstruction of justice, Level 6.

Steinert is being held without bond on possession of meth over five grams, Level 5; possession of a syringe, Level 6; possession of paraphernalia, Level 6; possession of marijuana, Level 6 and visiting a common nuisance, Class A misdemeanor.

In addition to filling out a form, the sheriff's office takes information through its anonymous tip line at 812-346-0342.

"We can't always act immediately on your information because of certain legal restraints, but it may point us in the right direction," the department said in the post. "If you have a drug problem and want help, call the Sheriff's Office and we will try to get you the help you need," the department posted.

"We would much rather take a person to get help than to jail. We are limited in what we can do, but hopefully we can give you good direction on where to seek help."

In Loving Memory of

Mary Lou Gibson-Cosby

Mary Lou Gibson-Cosby, 78, of Wabash, Indiana, and daughter of the late William and Mary (Watson) Gibson, was born November 30, 1940, in Madison, Indiana. She attended Broadway High School and graduated from Madison Consolidated High School. She earned an associate's degree in nursing in Indianapolis, and worked in Wabash as a licensed practical nurse for Dr. Richard LaSalle. She also earned an associate degree in early childhood education and owned and operated Mary's Family Day Care Plus in Wabash. Throughout the over fifty years she worked in the childcare industry, her attentive care and guidance touched the lives of many of the children and families in her community. She also owned and operated a real estate entrepreneurship in Wabash along with her son, Andre for the last twenty years.

Mrs. Gibson-Cosby enjoyed flower gardening, raising and watching birds, and was adored by her beloved dog, Daisy. She was a member of Broadway Baptist Church in Madison and Zion Lutheran Church in Wabash for over 30 years. Her favorite Bible verse was Philippians 4:13: "I can do all things through Him, who gives me strength." Her strength was something for which she was admired, but she would be quick to tell you that her strength came from her faith and trust in Jesus.

Mrs. Gibson-Cosby passed away after a long, courageous battle with cancer on Saturday, November 23, 2019, at the home of her son and daughter-in-law in Indianapolis.

Her life will be cherished by her children, whom she nurtured, guided, and loved beautifully and unconditionally: James "Jim" Cosby, III and his wife, Connie of Indianapolis, Andre Cosby, of Wabash, Christopher Cosby and his wife, Cindi of Carmel, Indiana, Mary Ann Abramson and husband, Dustin of Avon, Indiana, and Matthew Cosby of Houston, Texas; two sisters: Geraldine Lacey and her husband, James of Indianapolis, Wilma Banks of Indianapolis; one brother, Floyd Gibson, and his girlfriend Jeri Marshall of Deputy, Indiana; nine grandchildren: Malcolm Wells and wife Komal of Indianapolis(Jim & Connie), Kaedyn Day of Wabash(Andre), Jazen Cosby, Cyan Cosby, Honor Cosby and Drej Cosby, all of Carmel(Chris & Cindi), and Mary Malyka Abramson, Keith Abramson and Maya Abramson, all of Avon(Mary Ann & Dustin); two great grandchildren: Anya Wells and Ahyan Wells, both of Indianapolis(Malcolm & Komal); and her former husband, James "Jim" Cosby, II of Wabash.

In addition to her parents, she was preceded in death by three brothers: Jimmy Gibson, Junior Gibson and Harold Henry Gibson; and two sisters: Georgia Gibson and Priscilla Scott.

Reverend Harvey Leggett will conduct the service at 12:00 on Saturday, November 30 at The Broadway Church, 615 Broadway St in Downtown Madison, with interment to follow in Springdale Cemetery.

Friends and family may call at the Lytle-Welty Funeral Home's, Main Street Chapel, 423 W Main St in Madison from 5:00 to 8:00 PM on Friday, November 29, and at the church from 11:00 AM until time of service on Saturday, November 30.

A memorial service will be held in Wabash, IN at Zion Lutheran Church at a date to be determined.

Stan Attenberger traded science for music and art

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

Stan Attenberger used to work in Oak Ridge, Tennessee, as a nuclear physicist. Or maybe a rocket scientist. Or maybe something else. The thing about working at Oak Ridge is you don't really talk about it. It's the site that was established in 1943 for pilot-scale production and separation of plutonium for the World War II Manhattan Project.

But when it came time to retire, Stan and his wife Peggy approached it in a most scientific way. "Peggy was tired of the southern heat down in Tennessee," Stan said, "so moving south was out. And though we are from Michigan, we didn't want the northern cold either. We drew a band on the map, right across the middle of the country, and started to explore.

"We started over at the Atlantic coast, and started moving west, checking out the smaller towns as we went. We were looking for a walkable city, with a vibrant music scene, and nice shaded sidewalks.

"As luck would have it we hit Madison on a weeknight when JoeyG's open mic was going on. Bill Lackner was hosting. Somebody loaned me a guitar and I sang 'It's a Wonderful World' by Louis Armstrong. We were pretty much hooked after that. We moved here in 2010.

"Madison is my sweet spot. It's the kind of life I want to have. I get to play and sing for people, and I can pursue my painting. The arts scene here is very supportive. Moving here has been a blossoming of music for me, with so much great live music going on all around.

"The GuitarBQ thing that Scott Murray Bate started some years back was an inspiration to write some original songs, too. Today I regularly play at the Taproom, Thomas Family Winery, Mad Paddle and I've done some of the big Red Bike ensemble shows.

"This December I'll be doing my annual Christmas show at Thomas Family Winery. The first show is Dec. 1 at 1 in the afternoon, and then also on Dec. 8 and 15. I have a bunch of beautiful holiday songs people may not have heard, plus I do the traditional favorites, but with a twist.

"Some of the titles include 'A New Star Shining' as recorded by Ricky Skaggs, 'Cherry Tree Carol' by Jose Feliciano, and 'Christmas for Cowboys' by John Denver. I encourage people to come out and enjoy a nice Sunday afternoon at the Winery. It will be very low-key and fun."

Or if you prefer your holiday music in a more classical style, the Louisville Brass Ensemble will be back at Trinity United Methodist Church Wednesday, Dec. 3. I caught up with Brett Shuster, trombonist and spokesman for the ensemble, and got all the details.

"The ensemble has been around for about 30 years," Brett said, "but we first started coming to Madison 15 years ago when Alvin Tripp contacted us. We do about half holiday music and half classical. We have about 100 arrangements, so people will never hear the same thing year to year.

"This year we will be opening with a very special new composition titled 'Flare' by University of Louisville faculty member Steve Rouse. In addition to me on trombone, we also have two trumpets, a horn and a tuba. The sound is very symphonic, especially in the great acoustics at Trinity church.

"People can expect to hear some very fine brass music played at the highest level by artists who've played around the world in various chamber ensembles and orchestras. Plus, we like to talk and give a lot of good informative info on each piece before we play it."

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK:

The Wednesday before Thanksgiving is always a hopping night downtown. Everyone is home for the holiday, especially younger adults, looking for a fun place to hang out. And I can say unequivocally, the hot spot on Wednesday night will be the Red Bicycle Hall for Jimmy Davis' Funktastic Dance Party. In Jimmy's words, "It'll be a '60s/'70s funk party featuring James Brown, P-Funk, Stevie Wonder, and Mavis Staples songs, complete with horns, keys and a couple hours of just getting down!"

Charlie Rohlfing is a stalwart of the RiverRoots Festival committee, a campfire guitar strummer, and a partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening. Find him out and about or at charlie@madison-courier.com

Cubs girls, Rebel boys each claim blowout wins

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

The junior varsity version of the annual Turkey Shootout proved to be anti-climatic with Madison and Southwestern each winning a game in blowout fashion Monday in Hanover.

Madison started the night with a dominating 65-12 win in the girls game and Southwestern returned the favor by pulling out a 44-25 win in the boys matchup.

The varsity will hit the floor on Wednesday starting with the girls game at 6 p.m. Madison holds a 19-6 lead in the girls contest and has won seven-straight in the series. Madison leads the boys series 40-12 but Southwestern has won the last two meetings.

GIRLS

Madison 65, Southwestern 12

Madison throttled the Rebels from the opening tip and ran away with the easy 43-point win in the lifter.

Southwestern was limited to just one field goal in the contest, a short jumper by Olivia Bruce late in the second quarter. All of the Rebels' other points came from the free-throw line where they were just 10-for-23 on the night.

Madison wasted little time turning the game into a rout. The Cubs led 11-0 after the first quarter and turned on the jets in the second, jumping out to a 31-6 halftime cushion.

Two more big quarters of 15 points

Madison's Cameran Cahall (above, with ball) pulls down a rebound during the girls game. Southwestern's Colton Cloud (above right, 4) drives to the basket over Madison's Drew Hayden (42) during the boys game. Madison's Andrew Scroggins (right) glides into the basket for two points. The Cubs' Cadence Traylor (below) rushes down the floor after a steal. Both games were blowouts with the Madison girls winning 65-12 and the Southwestern boys winning 44-25. and 19 points allowed Madison to blow out the game. The 53-point final margin was the biggest of the game.

All 11 players in uniform for Madison scored in the game with Cameran Cahall leading with 12 off the bench and Breck Ralston scoring 10 points. Cadence Traylor added nine points for the Cubs. Cahall also had six assists, Traylor had five steals and Mary Johnson pulled down eight rebounds to go with six points.

Injuries limited Southwestern to having just six players available and only three broke into the scoring column. Bruce had six points while Syrenia Hardy and Allie Wilberding scored three points each.

Madison, now 5-1 on the season, returns to action on Wednesday, Dec. 4 when the Cubs travel to Floyd Central. Southwestern, now 1-5, heads to Shawe on Monday, Dec. 2.

BOYS

Southwestern 44, Madison 25

Southwestern took advantage of a lethargic Cub squad to build a big halftime lead and then pulled away in the second half to post the 19-point victory.

The Cubs spent the first 14 minutes of the game spinning their wheels on offense against the Southwestern zone and managed only eight points in the first half. The Rebels weren't much better, but they still took a 21-8 lead into halftime.

Southwestern's own offense ground to a halt in the third quarter with the Rebels recording only two free throws over the span. As a result, Madison was able to chip away at the lead, pulling to within 23-14 by the end of the quarter.

But strong shooting at the free-throw line — Southwestern went 11-for-16 in the fourth quarter — allowed the Rebels to pull away and claim the win.

Southwestern's Colton Cloud went 10-for-12 at the free-throw line and scored 18 points to lead all scorers while Bryce Hatton had eight points and Norman Jones scored seven.

Madison had nine different players score in the game but none approached double figures. Carson Roark led the Cubs with seven points while Quentin Moon and Curtis Jacobs had four points each.

Southwestern, now 1-0 on the season, travels to Shawe on Monday, Dec. 2. Madison, now 0-1, heads to Trinity Lutheran on Saturday.

Shawe falls at Borden

The Hilltoppers, now 0-3 on the season, travel to Medora on Tuesday and host Southwestern on Friday, Dec. 6.

Jackson-Davis helps IU hold off LaTech 88-75

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON — Archie Miller enjoyed seeing the Indiana Hoosiers offense work in almost perfect sync during the first half Monday night.

He grimaced at the second half.

Freshman Trayce Jackson-Davis scored a season-high 21 points, Al Durham added 18 and the Hoosiers overcame continual miscues to hold on for an 88-75 victory over Louisiana Tech.

"We were fortunate to be bailed out by some rebounds and some fouls and some free throws," Miller said. "A team at home, up 23-8, you've got to find a way to put that nail in the coffin at some point. We didn't do it tonight."

Clearly, the game tape will demonstrate what needs to be fixed.

But the bottom line: Indiana is 6-0 for the first time since 2012-13 and found a way to persevere thanks largely to Jackson-Davis. He scored 17 of the Hoosiers' 36 second-half points, made four of Indiana's eight second-half baskets and wound up 11 of 13 from the free-throw line. He also had 11 rebounds for his third double-double of the season.

Without him, the Bulldogs might have come all the way back from the 39-16 deficit they faced with 7:29 left in the first half.

"I thought they were very sharp early on and we got ourselves in a hole we couldn't dig out of," Louisiana Tech coach Eric Konkol said. "It says a lot about our guys to keep playing extremely hard and just find a way. Proud of our guys for the fight but the turnovers that we had and the number of times that we fouled them and put them on the free-throw line really hurt us."

Miller felt similarly about the final 20 minutes when the Hoosiers shot just 32 percent from the field, missed all six 3-pointers and committed 12 turnovers.

The cracks, though, started showing late in the first half when Louisiana Tech cut the halftime deficit to 52-36 then continued through the second half.

Two free throws from DaQuan Bracey with 11:19 to go made it 62-51. Several times, the Bulldogs had chances to get within single digits. Amorie Archibald scored a career high 24 points to lead Louisiana Tech (4-2) and Isaiah Crawford added a career best 14 to keep the pressure on Indiana.

But the constant parade to the free-throw line helped Indiana stay in control and eventually close it out.

"Second half, embarrassing really how we took care of the ball," Miller said. "We weren't able to really play the game the right way in terms of how we moved it, shared it, free-flowing. It just became a dribble-fest, a turnover-fest and there weren't a whole lot of people in my opinion in sync. It was really hard to play the second half based on that."

BIG PICTURE

Louisiana Tech: After allowing 57.4 points in its first five games, Konkol's team yielded 52 in the first half. But the experienced Bulldogs showed poise and grit and managed to fight their way back with a tremendous second-half rally on the Hoosiers home court.

Indiana: Miller said as good as the first half was, the second half was equally bad. The Hoosiers cannot afford to play so inconsistently when the competition ramps up over the next over the next two weeks.

STAT SHEET

Louisiana Tech: Bracey scored 10 points. ... The Bulldogs are 4-12 all-time against the Big Ten and 0-3 all-time against the Hoosiers with the three losses coming by margins of 21, 29 and 13. ... Louisiana Tech came into the game with the nation's No. 20 scoring defense and had held opponents to 34.9% shooting, No. 17 in the nation. ... The Bulldogs were 10 of 25 on 3-pointers.

Indiana: Devonte Green made 5 of 8 from the field in his first six minutes on the court and finished with 16 points. ... Indiana was 28 of 38 from the free-throw line. ... Rob Phinisee took the night off because of multiple injuries including taking a shot to the face in Indiana's previous game. Miller said he hopes to have Phinisee back at practice Wednesday or Thursday.

UP NEXT

Winless Bengals bench Finley, for Andy Dalton

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI — With the season slipping away, the Bengals are turning back to Andy Dalton to try to get that elusive first win.

Coach Zac Taylor announced Monday that Dalton was returning as the starting quarterback, ending a three-week experiment with rookie Ryan Finley running the offense. Finley completed only 47 percent of his passes and the offense failed to score more than 13 points in any game.

The move came a day after a 16-10 loss to the Steelers in which Finley fumbled twice.

The Bengals (0-11) are the NFL's only winless team as they get ready to host the Jets (4-7), who have won three straight. The 11-game losing streak in one season is the longest in franchise history. Their best chance to avoid an 0-16 season is to go with an 11-year veteran quarterback instead of a rookie.

"We just want to win, and that veteran presence he has will certainly be helpful through all the things we've experienced on offense," Taylor said.

Dalton wasn't available after the decision was announced. When he was benched after an 0-8 start, he complained that the Bengals didn't leave time before the trade deadline to explore a deal with a team that needed a starter.

Taylor said there have been no residual hard feelings between them.

"It was hard for him to hear when we made the change initially, but just being the person he is, he's somebody that I was able to communicate with the last couple of weeks," Taylor said. "He didn't just turn a cold shoulder to me."

And so, the Finley experiment is finished.

The Bengals set themselves up for more losses when they installed the fourth-round pick as the starter, saying they wanted to use the rest of the season to see how he fits into their long-term plans. Finley hadn't played a snap in the regular season and hadn't even practiced with the starting offense.

It was clear the Bengals were on the path to a winless season.

"Right now, we had to make this move," Taylor said.

STOCK UP

STOCK DOWN

Finley wanted to show he could be considered a starter in Cincinnati, but he struggled in a no-win situation. Finley threw a pick-6 and had five turnovers in his three games.

NEXT STEPS

The Bengals are two games worse than any other team in the league, leaving them in solid position for the first overall pick in the draft. They face the Jets, the Dolphins (2-9), the Patriots (10-1) and the Browns (5-6) twice down the stretch.

BRIDGE

TRY TO GIVE YOURSELF PATS ON THE BACK

Englishman Danny Roth scours bridge literature, looking for errors by players and scribes. He has put 60 of these into "Outsmart the Bridge Experts" (HNB Publishing).

There are declarer-play and defense problems, and you have the chance to do better than the original player or author. Roth describes what actually happened, then asks, "Are you happy with that?"

In this example from the book, how should South play in six hearts after West leads the diamond queen?

Three hearts guaranteed a solid suit and set it as trump, three spades promised that ace, and four clubs showed a first-round control.

Clearly, South must avoid losing two diamond tricks. At the table, declarer, worried about a 6=1 diamond break, crossed to the spade ace at trick two and returned dummy's second diamond. When East discarded (best), South won with his king and ruffed a diamond with the heart seven. East overruffed and shifted to a club, but declarer won, cashed a round of trumps and ruffed his last diamond with the heart five. When East couldn't overruff, declarer claimed. Are you happy with that?

As Roth points out, South did well; if he had tried to cash the diamond king at trick two, he would have gone down. But his line could have been improved. Before crossing to the spade ace, cash the two top clubs; maybe the queen will fall. Admittedly it is only a 4% chance, but casinos are often happy with that edge.

MCHS Band marches its way to third in the state

By HUNTER GETZ
The Madisonian

The Madison Consolidated High School Marching Band recently placed third in the 2019 Marching Band Scholastic Class Finals in the Class B section. The MCHS marching band placed 14th for the 2018-2019 school year. The marching band is comprised of students of all grades from MCHS, and the competition consisted of 15 bands total who had qualified from eight different regions from around the state.

To get to state, the Marching Cubs had to get a gold rating at the ISSMA Prelims. They also had to have the dedication and be willing to put in the hard work described by MCHS Band Director Katie Zolvinski.

"I (also) think your students have to have drive and dedication. If they have that, they can get themselves there no matter what I tell them. Madison has a great core of students. We talked pretty often about what kind of band we wanted. They wanted to be competitive, and so I pushed them to be the best competitive band they could be," Zolvinski said.

Many of the band members said they were in shock and denial, as some didn't even expect to make it to state this year, let alone place third.

"It was pretty stressful with the bus breaking down and our times being moved and the whole thing being moved inside but it was still a lot of fun being able to suffer with my band family," one band member stated.

"I couldn't believe it, I was actually speechless, especially because we've had better performances than that. I just can't help but wonder what would've happened if it wasn't raining and we preformed our show to the best of our abilities," another member said.

A graduating senior said they hope the band can continue to grow in both numbers and a strong sense of leadership. Other members of the group hope to improve on visual and marching as one member recalled not doing so well in the past.

One thing nobody expected that day was that the bus broke down before they got to the state competition, and the weather forced it inside. In spite of the hardship, the marching band was still able to perform admirably.

The MCHS Marching Band would love to continue to build on this year's success improving on many of the skills it takes to be a successful marching band like visuals, staying motivated and determined, timing, and growing the program's number of participants.

PETS OF THE WEEK

T'CHALLA

T'challa is a 1-year-old male husky mix who loves to run and play. He still has a lot of puppy in him, so he will need some obedience training. He is easily trainable because he loves treats. He learned how to sit within five minutes. He is very loving and energetic. But, when it is time to be serious and calm down, he knows how to do that. He was brought in with his brother, Diesel, so he gets along with other dogs and cats. He and his brother were brought in by animal control suffering from starvation, but since the animal shelter staff has been taking care of them, they have been gaining weight.

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has 8 dogs or puppies, and 24 cats or kittens available. Pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption can be viewed at www.sisaveapet.com

Normal shelter hours are Monday, Thursday and Friday from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday from noon to 4 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 3 p.m. It is closed Tuesday. The shelter number is (812) 273-1788 and the email is animal.shelter39@jefferson-county.in.gov

All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spayed or neutered. Discount is courtesy of the Animal Shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones, and exercising the pets. Contact the shelter for details.

The shelter is a registered organization with the Kroger Community Rewards program. To support the shelter, register a Kroger card at www.krogercommunityrewards.com and enter FL919.

Support the shelter while walking your dog. Use the "Walk for a Dog" or "Woof-Trax" app available through the App Store or Google Play. For each mile walked, a donation is made to the shelter.

A list of needed items can be found on the shelter website. Donations can be mailed to 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison, IN 47250 or dropped off during shelter hours.

The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and proceeds put toward the medical fund. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated.

Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at anytime in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter, call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

For animal control issues in Madison, call (812) 265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call (812) 265-2648.

PARIS

Paris is a beautiful lady who loves to be held and get a lot of attention. She is a loving gal and would make a great lap cat. She is not a fan of loud noises, so a house without young kids would be great. She is a playful cat who can play all day but also lay down and take a cat nap during part of the day. She loves sitting on a shelf, so a cat tree would make her happy.

The Shelter is currently in need of canned cat food.

Supportive sister doesn't want to be overbearing to family

Dear Annie: I have a sister who has had six surgeries to beat two types of cancer. She has residual complications but is working forward. I have been with her through all her surgeries and rehab. I live on the West Coast, and she lives on the East Coast.

I have called her every day since her first diagnosis. Now that she has had a relapse, she is blocking me out. She is hostile and acts as if she is frustrated with me. I am not sure if I should stop calling and just express that I am here if she needs me. Yet, I don't want her to feel deserted, as she has no friends or family nearby.

Not sure how to handle this, Annie. I would appreciate your advice. — Just Love My Sister

Dear Just Love My Sister: My heart breaks for both of you. This is a very difficult situation for your whole family. Sometimes hostile and frustrated people are really just scared people. And she is understandably very scared right now. Also, various illnesses, and their associated medications, can exaggerate feelings of anger and hostility.

Try to remember the phrase, "Hurt people hurt people." Your sister is in pain right now and pushing you away. It has nothing to do with you and everything to do with what she is facing. Yes, you should absolutely express that you are here for her if she needs you. Ask her what she would like for you to do for her. If it's to limit your calls for the time being, then send her love quietly, either in the form of prayer or meditation. I know it is hard, but try not to take her actions personally. Just let her know how much you love her and that you are available for her in any way she needs.
